Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from United States Civil Defense Police Services: Federal Civil Defense Administration Modern warfare is not limited to military men. Every city, village, and farm can be involved; and every man, woman, and child is a possible casualty. New services must be organized, and existing services must be expanded. As existing organizations, the police services must continue to perform their regular activities of protecting the public and preserving order. In addition, they should train regular and auxiliary police for special civil defense duties. This administrative guide suggests methods and techniques for assisting police officials responsible for organizing or directing police civil defense services. State Civil Defense Organization Because of differences in the organization of State governments and, also, geographical variations among States, the exact composition of the State civil defense organization is a matter for each State to determine. The larger and more populous States should be divided into civil defense sections to provide flexible operation and efficient coordination. Where State sections are established they should be headed by sectional directors, who would be deputies to the...
